

UNIVERSAL PRECAUTIONS

Health Education offers a basic program on how to avoid blood borne illnesses through the proper use of personal protective equipment at work and at home. Learning how to disinfect an area contaminated with blood is one of the major goals of the program. Understanding how infections are transmitted and how to stop these transmissions are essential components of this program. Being able to determine what is a good disinfectant and what is not, assists participants in reducing the risks of infection.